

Dwight D. Eisenhower Presidential Library & Museum
Audiovisual Department
Gerald D. Morgan Photographs
79-5-1--32

79-5-1

Photograph of a large crowd of Soviet workers gathering on a factory floor. The workers are standing in the crowd or on top of the machinery. A few of the workers are holding up signs that condemn US actions regarding the U-2 spy plane incident. The sign in the lower left, when translated reads, "Watch American War Provocateurs."

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x8 b/w print.

79-5-2

Photograph of a speaker giving a speech from a podium. Two men are standing to the man's left as the speech is delivered.

Copyright: Unknown. One 4x6 b/w print.

79-5-3

Photograph of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in a large crowd and surrounded by reporters who are holding microphones in front of Khrushchev.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x8 b/w print.

79-5-4

Photograph of a large crowd of Soviet citizens. They are possibly gathering on the main floor of a factory or a courtyard, and are drawn to something off camera.

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x8 b/w print.

79-5-5

Photograph of several speakers standing before a microphone and podium, reading a written speech. Two men and one woman are standing at the microphone and the remaining men are standing behind them. The wall behind the speakers is made of thick glass and there is a banner hanging above them. The text is partially translated as, "aggressors provocative actions."

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x8 b/w print.

79-5-6

Photograph of Soviet citizens writing and signing their names in two large ledgers. They are writing one at a time.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x8 b/w print.

79-5-7

Photograph of Soviet citizens looking at exhibit displays of the U-2 incident. Two large displays show the various reconnaissance photographs taken by the U-2 and photographs of the U-2 wreckage and site. The citizens are moving along in a line down the exhibit. The signs above the displays are written in both Russian and English, reading 'Powers Francis Gary, American Spy.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-8

Photograph of Soviet citizens looking at an exhibit display, giving a profile of Powers Francis Gary, the captured pilot from the U-2 incident. The exhibit shows his flight records, identification, and other important documents found on his person, and three (3) photographs: one in his flight suit, as a Soviet prisoner, and a personal portrait. The sign above the display is written in both Russian and English, reading 'Powers Francis Gary, the pilot of the shot American plane.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-9

Photograph of a Soviet official pointing out the various types of equipment recovered from the U-2 plane wreckage to a crowd of Soviet citizens. Some of the items include oxygen tanks, the flight suit, helmet, and a recovered parachute; all of which belonged to Powers Francis Gary. There are two pictures of U-2 planes hanging on the wall in the background.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print

79-5-10

Photograph of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev speaking to a group of Soviet citizens at the U-2 plane exhibit. Two men are holding up microphones and are recording Khrushchev's speech. The two exhibit displays, written in both English and Russian, are in the background, their signs reading, 'This is what the American Spy was equipped with' and 'Ammunition and outfit of the American spy.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-11

Photograph of Nikita Khrushchev and other Soviet officials examining the U-2 plane and pilot equipment recovered from the wreckage. There is a flight suit and helmet, an oxygen tank, the cracked aircraft canopy, and a portion of the plane tail leaning against the wall.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-12

Photograph of the poison needle that Powers Francis Gary was given in order to commit suicide before being captured. The needle is placed next to a ruler to show its small length.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-13

Photograph of personal items and money belonging to Powers Francis Gary after he was captured by the Soviets. These personal items include watches, rings, a coin collection, and monetary bills in both US dollars and Russian rubles. The items are in a glass display case and the Russian label when translated reads, 'money and valuables which was stocked with Powers to bribe the Soviet people.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-14

Photograph of survival gear items used by Powers Francis Gary and were recovered by the Soviets. These include a knife, matches, pistol, bullets, compass, binoculars, and a signal flare. The items are on display in a glass case and there are labels next to each of the items describing what they are in Russian.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-15

Photograph of a piece of U-2 wreckage that shows a list of the plane's radio channelization selections. There are twenty-one channels listed that are able to contact radio towers, control towers, and send emergency messages.

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-16

Photograph of severely damaged parts from the U-2 plane wreckage. There are damaged control panels, radar, and antenna parts displayed on a wooden table. Two exhibit labels standing behind the parts are written in both Russian and English, which read 'Airborne radio-reconnaissance equipment' and 'MP11719 Antenna.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-17

Photograph of severely damaged parts from the U-2 plane wreckage. There is a damaged antenna console and a recording device on display on a wooden table. Two exhibit labels standing behind the parts are written in both Russian and English, which read 'MP12342 Antenna' and 'MP12570 Magnetic Recorder.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-18

Photograph of damaged reconnaissance equipment from the U-2 plane wreckage on display. The parts are laid out on a wooden table and there are four exhibit labels, written in both Russian and English, which read 'Part of Fuselage, Camera Lens, Camera Rotary Ring, Camera (aircraft) Model 73-B.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-19

Photograph of the flight suit, helmet, oxygen regulator, and parachute used by Powers Francis Gary on display. The items are laid out on a wooden table and have exhibit labels behind them. The labels are written in both Russian and English, reading 'Partial Pressure Suit' 'Helmet' 'Bailout Oxygen Regulator' and 'Switlings Pilot Chute.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-20

Photograph of the damaged fuselage canopy on display. The fuselage canopy's broken parts are set on display with the canopy remains and exhibit labels explain its various parts. The exhibit labels are written in both Russian and English, reading 'Jettison able part' and 'Forward unremovable part of the canopy.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x7 b/w print.

79-5-21

Photograph of the various U-2 mechanical parts that were recovered from the wreckage site. The parts are laid out on a long wooden table and there are signs behind the parts, written in both Russian and English, describing the parts. The parts include an autopilot device, transmitter, oil pressure indicator, engine speed indicator, exhaust gas temperature gauge, altimeter, airspeed indicator, and an astra-tracker.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-22

Photograph of the various U-2 mechanical parts that were recovered from the wreckage site. The parts are laid out on a long wooden table and there are signs behind the parts, written in both Russian and English, describing the parts. The parts include a refrigeration unit, internal pressure gauge, electrical heater with a blower, and aircraft oxygen tanks. The partial pressure suit is visible on the extreme right of the photograph.

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x9 b/w print.

79-5-23

Photograph of a large group of Soviet citizens examining the various wrecked U-2 plane parts. One man is standing above the crowd with a camera, taking pictures of the exhibit.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-24

Photograph of a group of Soviet citizens examining a wing section from the U-2 plane wreckage. There is a small exhibit label on the wing.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-25

Photograph of the damaged U-2 fuselage on display at the Soviet U-2 exhibit. The fuselage is roped off in a separate area and is supported by wooden sawhorses. The exhibit panels on Powers Francis Gary and his plane reconnaissance are in the background. Two exhibit signs on the fuselage, written in both Russian and English, read 'Center section of the aircraft.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x8 b/w print.

79-5-26

Photograph of Soviet citizens standing in line at a doorway marked 'entrance.' They are entering the exhibit hall of the U-2 remains. A Russian sign outside, when translated, reads 'exhibition displaying the remains of downed American plane.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x8 b/w print.

79-5-27

Photograph of a press conference taking place in a large auditorium. There is a panel of speakers sitting a table on stage and one man is standing with a written speech at a microphone. The audience has photographers and reporters.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-28

Photograph of plane wreckage in an open field, surrounding by Soviet civilians. The photograph has been altered, as indicated by the heavy shadowing and dark lines surrounding the people and wreckage.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-29

Photograph of a large map that shows the flight path of the U-2 plane and where it was shot down over the Soviet Union. The top caption is written in Russian and when translated it reads, 'Itinerary American aircraft reconnaissance flight over the territory of the Soviet Union.'

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x7 b/w print.

79-5-30

Photograph of a celebration occurring in the Red Square in Moscow. A father is holding his daughter up on his shoulders while she holds a flower. People in the background are waving flags and cheering. The Soviet emblem, the hammer and sickle, is visible on a building in the background.

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-31

Photograph of a celebration occurring in the Red Square in Moscow. There are large crowds gathered outside and are carrying banners, flags, and large portraits of Vladimir Lenin. The Kremlin is visible throughout the photograph. [Together with 79-5-32, this photo forms a panoramic view of Red Square.]

Copyright: Unknown. One 7x9 b/w print.

79-5-32

Photograph of a celebration occurring in the Red Square in Moscow. There are large crowds gathered outside and are carrying banners, flags, and large portraits of Vladimir Lenin and Karl Marx. The Kremlin is visible throughout the photograph. A banner hangs on the one of the buildings and when translated into English, it reads '1 May.' It is a May Day parade, which in the Soviet Union is celebrated as International Worker's Day. May 1 is also the day Powers Francis Gary's plane was shot down. . [Together with 79-5-3,1 this photo forms a panoramic view of Red Square.]

Copyright: Unknown. One 6x7 b/w print.