SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

John Bulkeley, a career naval officer, graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1933 and was serving in the Pacific at the start of World War II. He was a specialist in the use of PT boats and commanded the PT boat that evacuated General Douglas MacArthur from the Philippines in March 1942. William L. White, a journalist from Emporia, Kansas, wrote a book titled They Were Expendable about the exploits of Bulkeley's squadron. In 1945 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio produced a movie based on the book.

In early 1944 Bulkeley was transferred to Europe where he commanded patrol boats in the English Channel during the Normandy Invasion. He later commanded destroyers in the Atlantic fleet. After 1960 he held a number of land-based commands until his retirement.

The papers of John Bulkeley pertain primarily to his service in World War II. Most of the material consists of correspondence, memoranda and reports on his work with PT boats in the Philippines and during the Normandy Invasion, and on his involvement with the book and movie They Were Expendable. There is very little information on his early naval career or his career after World War II.
