In January, 1961, Secretary of State Christian A. Herter agreed to donate to the Eisenhower Library his papers relating to his service as Under Secretary of State and as Secretary of State. These papers were deposited in the Eisenhower Library on August 24, 1966. Later accretions to this collection were received in February and March, 2006.

Linear feet shelf space occupied: 9
Approximate number of pages: 17,000
Approximate number of items: 8,500

Literary property rights in Mr. Herter’s unpublished writings passed to the people of the United States upon Mr. Herter’s death on December 30, 1966.

By agreement with the donor, the following classes of documents will be withheld from research use:

1. Papers that are security classified pursuant to law or executive order until such classification shall be removed.

2. Papers the use of which may be prejudicial to the conduct of the foreign relations of the United States.

3. Papers containing statements made in confidence by or to Mr. Herter or papers containing statements which might be used to injure, embarrass, or harass any person.
The bulk of the papers of Christian Archibald Herter, with one minor exception, fall entirely within the years 1957 to 1961. During this period Mr. Herter served as Under Secretary of State from 1957 to 1959 and Secretary of State from 1959 to 1961. There are also few personal items from 1937-1950, materials relating to his term as Governor of Massachusetts, and from the post-Eisenhower administration period. In addition, there are condolence letters received by Mrs. Herter following her husband’s death.

It is fitting that this statesman’s life began in an international setting. Born in Paris to American parents in 1895, Mr. Herter spent his first nine years there before coming to the United States. He attended Browning School of New York City and graduated at the age of fifteen. At sixteen he entered Harvard University and, in 1915, graduated cum laude with a degree in fine arts.

His career as a diplomat began in 1916 when a Harvard classmate assisted him in obtaining an assignment to the American Embassy in Berlin. After the United States declared war against the Central Powers, Herter worked in the Department of State and dealt primarily with the problems involving prisoners of war and interned enemy aliens. For a short time in 1919, he served with the American Peace Commission at Paris. From 1920 to 1924, Herter assisted Herbert Hoover with American relief efforts in Europe.

After a stint as coeditor of a small publication, the Independent, Herter entered Massachusetts politics and was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1930. Twelve years later he entered the national arena by being elected to the United State House of Representatives. Although elected as a critic of the New Deal, Herter’s main interests as a Congressman were in international affairs. In 1947 he served with distinction as Chairman of the House Select Committee on European Aid, which conducted an extensive study of conditions in Europe. As a result of his work with this committee and his role in the subsequent congressional discussions of the European Recovery Program, Congressman Herter gained prominence as the authority in foreign affairs. For the remainder of his years in Congress, Herter ardently supported American aid in Europe.

During the years 1951 and 1952, Herter involved himself more deeply in national Republican politics. In 1951 he met General Eisenhower in Paris and advised him to announce his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination. He was one of nineteen congressmen who, in February, 1952, urged the General to run for President. Herter served as co-chairman of the Eisenhower For President Committee and, at the Republican National Convention, supported Eisenhower’s nomination. Herter also ran for Governor of Massachusetts in 1952 and upset that state’s Democratic incumbent. The popularity of Herter’s gubernatorial administration during the years 1953-57 encouraged some support for him as a possible Presidential contender in the event Eisenhower did not run again. Herter did not desire to challenge President Eisenhower for the Republican nomination in 1956. He was, however, an unwilling figure in Harold Stassen’s abortive effort to remove Richard Nixon from the ticket as the Republican vice presidential candidate. Herter refused to campaign against Nixon and, in fact, at the Republican National Convention, formally nominated him for re-election.

Herter’s participation in the conduct of the Eisenhower Administration’s foreign policy began in February 1957, with his confirmation as Under Secretary of State. Herter assumed many functions which were of little interest to Secretary of State Dulles such as administrative chores and economic matters. Herter apparently experienced some uncomfortable moments in his relationship with Secretary Dulles who did not always inform Herter of impending decisions.

As Under Secretary, Herter was automatically the chairman of the Operation Coordinating Board (OCB), an organ of the National Security Council, which was responsible for overseeing the execution of national security policies approved by the President. Herter also continually strove, while Under Secretary, to promote congressional support for the Administration’s mutual security and international cultural programs.

Secretary Dulles’ terminal illness forced his resignation from his post in early 1959 and, in April 1959, Herter was confirmed as Secretary of State. He was confirmed after a delay because of questions about his own health. Herter, although plagued by arthritis, was strong enough to gain the President’s confidence, but he never wielded the power of influence possessed by his predecessor.

Herter’s secretaryship was characterized primarily by a series of diplomatic holding actions. For the most part, he attempted to carry out policies established by Dulles, and any changes made were normally tactical adjustments rather than reversals of strategy. He encouraged the President to use international goodwill trips to improve relations with various countries. Dulles had opposed such trips. Herter also favored a modification of the “massive retaliation” policy of the Dulles years, believing that nuclear weapons had been overemphasized to the detriment of American limited war capabilities. Dulles himself saw the need for a reappraisal of this policy during his last few months as Secretary of State.

During most of Herter’s tenure as Secretary of State, the United States was involved, along with the United Kingdom and France, in protracted negotiations with the Soviet Union over Berlin and disarmament. He firmly resisted Soviet demands aimed at removing American influence from Berlin and consistently insisted on an adequate inspection system throughout the disarmament and nuclear test ban negotiations. He had to share criticism with the President over the handling of the U-2 incident and the subsequent failure of the Paris Summit Conference. Many crises which he faced, such as those in Laos, Cuba and the Congo, remained fluid and were carried over to the next administration.

Herter’s government service did not end at the close of the Eisenhower Administration. In December 1962, President John F. Kennedy asked Herter to serve as the President’s Special Representative For Trade Negotiations. He accepted this post and held it until his death in December 1966.
The Herter Papers consist of approximately 17,000 pages and are arranged into eight series. The papers contain much information concerning the day-to-day functioning of the Department of State. The sizeable quantity of material in these papers regarding patronage and personnel problems suggests that Herter spent much time dealing with these matters. Information on many of the diplomatic issues of concern to Secretary Herter is also found in this collection, although the quality and quantity of this documentation is uneven. Problem areas, issues, and events covered in varying degrees of detail include the Berlin crisis, disarmament and nuclear test ban negotiations, the U-2 and RB-47 incidents, preparations for a possible summit conference and the aborted Paris Summit of May 1960, the Congo, the United Nations, Cuba and Latin America, relations with the Soviet Union, and to a lesser extent, the Middle East and the Far East. Reflecting Herter’s interest in cultural affairs are the numerous items concerning the Brussels Fair and the United States exhibit in Moscow. Congressional involvement in foreign policy is another frequently recurring topic in these papers.

The largest of the seven series is the Chronological File (Series I) which constitutes over 40 percent of the collection and consists almost entirely of copies of outgoing correspondence and memoranda signed either by Herter or by his special assistants, Harry F. Stimson, Jr., and Max V. Krebs. Much of the Chronological File consists of routine acknowledgments and greetings, or memoranda concerning personnel matters, but documents pertaining to foreign policy matters can be found throughout this series. Relevant information can be most readily located in this series by consulting the annotated shelf list. Many of the items filed in Series I are duplicates of documents found elsewhere in these papers.

Series II, a file of memoranda of telephone conversations, probably provides deeper insights into the formulation of foreign policy than do the other series in these papers. This series contains approximately 3,000 pages or slightly less than 20 percent of the collections. The United States’ relations with its European allies, plans for the Summit Conference of May 1960, Berlin, disarmament talks, relations with the Soviet Union, United Nations affairs, and the Congo are some of the more frequently discussed topics in these conversations along with patronage, personnel questions, and congressional matters. Among the individuals with whom Herter discussed policy problems on the telephone were the President, Sherman Adams, Robert Anderson, Douglas Dillon, Thomas Gates, Andrew Goodpaster, Gordon Gray, James Hagerty, Henry Cabot Lodge, John McCone, Livingston Merchant and Wilton Persons.

Series II contains two segments: Presidential Telephone Calls and CAH Telephone Calls. Memoranda of Herter’s telephone conversations with the President were filed separately from those with other government officials. When these memoranda were created, however, the contents of a number of telephone conversations, including those with the President, were often recorded on single pages. Those portions of these pages containing the summaries of phone conversations with the President were then excised from the pages by Herter and the excised portions files into the folders labeled “Presidential Telephone Calls.” A staff archivist has prepared and inserted the following statement into the front of each of the folders labeled “CAH Telephone Calls” which contains pages from which excisions have been made:
“Records of telephone conversations between Christian A. Herter and President Dwight D. Eisenhower were excised from pages in this folder and filed separately into folders entitled ‘Presidential Telephone Calls’ by Mr. Herter or his staff before these papers were sent to the Eisenhower Library.”

Series III and V are similar in that they both consist primarily of material relating to speeches and public statements. Both series contain edited drafts, reading copies of speeches, press releases, printed matter, and a small quantity of correspondence. Series III - Statements 1956-61 contains Herter’s speeches given within the United States at such gatherings as professional meetings and university commencements. Located in this series is the only pre-1957 item in the papers, an undated draft of a speech given by Secretary Herter in November, 1956. Series V - International Trips and Conferences includes his public addresses and statements given at international conferences and on other trips abroad. These two series comprise almost one-fourth of the collection.

Series IV - Press Conferences contains fewer than 300 pages. About three-fourths of this material consists of printed Department of State releases of the Secretary’s press conference remarks. The remaining one-fourth consists of memoranda of the Secretary’s background conversations with individual or small groups of newsman. Herter preferred these background conferences to large press conferences because his remarks at the smaller meetings were not for attribution. Herter expounded at length on a wide range of major policy matters at these background conferences.

Series VI consists of official correspondence and memoranda. Types of documents include memoranda for the record, briefing papers and other material used at Cabinet meetings, an alphabetically arranged file of official correspondence, white papers, background papers concerning the U-2 incident and White House correspondence and memoranda of conversations with the President. This segment constitutes approximately 15 percent of the collection. Although a variety of foreign policy issues are covered in this material, most of the documentation is thin. Particularly striking is the scanty record of Herter’s private meetings with the President which was left in these papers.

Series VII is a small personnel file. A portion of its 1,000 pages is arranged alphabetically and a remaining small segment of miscellaneous material is arranged chronologically. This file contains information on ambassadorial appointments and replacements, appointments to delegations and commissions, and other patronage and personnel matters.

Series VIII appears to be a file maintained by Mrs. Herter relating to planning and protocol for international trips and visits by foreign leaders. Material in the series includes schedules, newspaper clippings, photographs, reports, guest lists and other related documents. Photographs have been transferred to the audiovisual department. The series contains approximately 500 pages and is arranged chronologically.

Series IX contains personal files maintained by Herter and his wife and dating from 1937-1967. Documents in this series include correspondence, articles and speeches written by Herter, newspaper clippings, photographs, tributes, and condolences sent to his wife after his death. The series contains approximately 1,000 pages and is arranged by type of document.

The arrangement of the Herter Papers conforms closely to the arrangement indicated on Annex B to Secretary Herter’s letter of gift signed on January 9, 1961. While most of the collection was in good order prior to being processed, the official correspondence and memoranda series and the personnel file were both in disarray at the time these papers were reviewed. These were arranged by a staff archivist. Some minor rearrangement was also performed in the Statements and International Conference series.

Photographs, photograph albums and one 33 1/3 rpm record were removed from these papers and transferred to the Eisenhower Library’s Audiovisual Archives. Two maps have been transferred to the Library’s map collection.

A small number of documents from these papers was removed because of security classification and placed in the Library’s vault when the collection was processed. Scholars may request mandatory declassification reviews on classified documents in these papers under the provisions of Executive Order 11652.

Material of relevance to Secretary Herter’s career can be found in other collections in the Library’s holdings, particularly in a number of series in Dwight D. Eisenhower’s Papers as President of the United States (Ann Whitman File). An extensive file of Secretary Herter’s official cables, messages, and memoranda for the President is located in the Herter portion of the Dulles-Herter series in the Ann Whitman File. Numerous briefing papers, messages, and telegrams originated by Herter can be found in the International Series of the Whitman File, and memoranda of Secretary Herter’s conversations with the President are filed in the Dwight D. Eisenhower Diaries Series, also in the Whitman File.

According to information in the Library’s solicitation file, additional papers for the periods of Secretary Herter’s life preceding and following his service in the Eisenhower Administration have been donated to Harvard University.

This gap was filled by the White House staff. When Herter became Secretary of State, White House Staff Secretary, General Andrew Goodpaster or his assistant, John S. D. Eisenhower, attended each of Secretary Herter’s private meetings with the President, took notes, and prepared comprehensive memoranda which paraphrased each of these conversations. These “memcons” are filed in the Dwight D. Eisenhower Diaries Series in the Ann Whitman File. See John S. D. Eisenhower, Strictly Personal, New York: Doubleday, 1974, p. 234.
