HISTORICAL NOTE

When the Eisenhower Administration took office in 1953, the Republicans lacked a coordinated program to handle the job of filling Presidential appointments and other jobs outside the U.S. Civil Service with people who were both competent and politically acceptable. President Eisenhower recommended that such a program be worked out and appointed Charles F. Willis Jr., as Special Assistant to coordinate its development. In May 1954 Mr. Willis sent a prospectus to all Federal departments, Republican senators and congressmen, and other interested officials. In June of that same year the program went into effect. The Office of Special Assistant for Executive Appointments continued to function until the end of the administration. After Charles Willis left the post, the position of Special Assistant was held successively by Edward Tait, Robert Gray, and Robert Hampton.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The collection of records of the Office of Special Assistant for Executive Appointments generated during the Eisenhower Administration focuses on the patronage appointments of the executive branch of the federal government for the period 1953-1961.

More than three-fourths of this accession consists of data used by the Office of the Special Assistant for Executive Appointments. This data was kept in two files, an index and a biographical file. The personnel index was developed as a tracking device to locate correspondence concerning endorsements. Most, if not all, of this correspondence is filed in the Central Files and may be found by reference to that file without the use of this index. The biographical file contains biographical sketches of members of the administration and possible candidates for appointive positions. These sketches, which appear to have been written by both the staff and the applicants, contain information called from various Who's Whos, trade journals, and newspapers as well as information supplied by the applicants.

A small portion of the file relates to the identification of positions which needed to be filled. Notebooks were kept which contained information on appointive offices within the departments and independent agencies. Each entry listed the name of the incumbent, the length of his term, his duties and salary as well as the laws governing appointment. There is also correspondence, memoranda, lists and reports on upcoming vacancies, resignations, appointments, and evaluations of the effectiveness of the program.

About 9% of this accession is composed of miscellaneous material generated by the special patronage assistants and those who shared their office. Included in this file are: material on the operation of the National Citizens for Eisenhower Congressional Committee during the 1954 campaign, drafts of speeches on disarmament and radio-active material, copies of Robert Cutler's outgoing letters from the fall of 1956, campaign speeches of Mary Keedick and Robert Gray, a Republican Speech Kit for 1956, speeches of Robert Gray on the budget and the "New Republicanism," 1960 campaign material, and drafts of the 1961 State of the Union Message.
